

Week 7 Journal Entry

In this week's lesson I was able to further develop my ideas for a product and how I will achieve (ie. what I need to know about the topics I am researching). This is also consequential to the feedback I received, regarding how fuzzy my idea was, and how it needed to be more particular. I went about doing this through de-bunking the concepts of "human reactions" and its link to "instinct", explored in my original inquiry question, then developing them to make them more specific to my area of interest, which is the performing arts. This rethinking delays the process, but is vital to make further progression in my research.